SUBJECT: Intuition: Increasing Your Servant Leadership Bandwidth

On Friday morning we had an exciting kickoff to our 2016 Dallas SLLC sessions by exploring the use of intuition in servant leadership. We learned about gut, expert, and strategic intuition and how our subconscious quickly processes data and experience to give us valuable intuitive insights. We shared our personal stories of intuition with each other and learned how it shows up in different ways for each of us. We dialogued the perception of intuition in our organization's culture and how to strengthen support for intuitive decision making. Our heartfelt thanks and appreciation to Ben Dilla and Parkland Hospital System for hosting us and providing a tour of their amazing new patient-centered facility. Thank you to Shaunna Black and Mike Blevins as well for sharing their personal stories to encourage us all on the journey of learning when and how to trust our instincts.

SUGGESTED ACTION ITEM

Keep an intuition journal. When making a decision, record your thoughts and feelings, both mental and physical, and the outcome of your action. Review your journal periodically to learn the ways your intuition speaks to you and how to keep yourself open to hearing and using this valuable resource.

YOUR FEEDBACK

Thank you for your feedback. Your comments about what you found most valuable focused on networking with new participants, building relationships, hearing personal stories about how other organizations implement servant leadership, the guest speakers, learning about the different types of science-based intuition and validating how they can be useful and acceptable in business, the dialogue time, and learning how other companies use servant leadership in different industries.

Your suggestions for improvement focused on spending more time in session, more time in dialogue, less personal stories, food, a larger venue, a better sound system, more opportunities to get to know other members and longer networking, hearing more about concrete skills to tap into intuition, and tying intuition to servant leadership.

We are looking forward our second session on Friday, June 10, at Communities Foundation of Texas. We will be hosting a Servant Leadership Symposium. Please plan to take advantage of this opportunity to learn about many aspects of culture change from some experienced servant-leaders among your peers.

Until then,

Duane, Tara, Luis, Carol and all our TMCA Partners
